

Ruark Audio R5 im Test

With the R5, the British premium brand Ruark presents an audio compact system that plays almost all pieces: CD, radio, Bluetooth and streaming services have the multiroom-compatible system already on board as standard.

Overall, the sound but round and full, which is not least due to the rich amplifier power of 90 watts. The R5 is expandable with the Ruark models MRx, R2 Mk3 and R7 Mk3 to a powerful multiroom system.

Conclusion: No matter what you want to use - with the R5 from Ruark you can hardly do anything wrong. In addition to high-quality streaming, there are all the radio options and even a format-fixed CD player. USB, line in and out (RCA) as well as an optical connection, with which TV, console or also a turntable can be connected, provide further variety. The sound quality is convincing, but can probably be achieved with cheaper alternatives. In addition to the slightly too small failed display and minimal weaknesses in the high frequency range, there is nothing to complain about, the volume is quite sufficient even for smaller house parties.
